Abstract: This article aims to shed light on Abu's (a Dayah leader in Aceh) paradigm and strategy in reorienting Islamic education inside the dayah educational framework in the last two decades. Even now, the Acehnese people's socio-religious life still accepts and includes the traditional Islamic educational institution known as dayah. However, Dayah must adapt to the dynamics of the changing times to ensure its graduates to participate more fully in society. The Dayah in West-South and East-North coasts of Aceh are the subjects of this qualitative study using a multi-site case study. They are Dayah Asasul Islamiyah in East Aceh, Dayah Madinatuddinnyah Nurul Huda in North Aceh, Dayah Madinatuddinnyah Darul 'Ulimuddin in Southwest Aceh, and Dayah Darussalam Labuhan Haji in South Aceh. The research data was gathered through purposeful-snowballing in-depth interviewing techniques with a variety of informants, including Abu as the dayah's leader. After that, the data is processed using interactive analytic procedures, which include condensing, presenting, and concluding. According to the study's findings, Aceh's dayah leaders' (Abu) paradigm has shifted from being exclusive and orthodox to being inclusive and flexible during the dayah's current period of development. The Mua'dalah programme and the higher education programme Ma'had Aly were both implemented as part of Abu's strategy to reorient Islamic education in dayah, as well as the training of human resources to become educators.

INTRODUCTION

Dayah is one of the Islam archipelago’s treasures (Hadi, 2017; Raya, 2021; Riza & Mistar, 2022; Syarifuddin, 2021). Its presence is directly related to the process of entering and developing Islam in the early days of this region (Mashuri, 2013; Subakat, 2017). The method of spreading Islam which is estimated to take place in the 8th century AD in the Peurlak area is also supported by the tradition of learning Islamic teachings in the corners of the mosque, which in Arabic is called zawiyah (Handriawan, 2016; La Moane et al., 2023; Nanti et al., 2018). This tradition is a legacy of the practice of teaching Islam carried out by the Prophet Muhammad and his companions while in Medina (Baiza, 2018; Sahin, 2021; Suyanta, 2012). In the development of Islam in Aceh through the Peurlak kingdom, this dayah later became an educational institution that functioned to answer human resource development needs at that time. On this basis, it is not surprising that many of the graduates of the dayah at that time became Qadih and even became kings like Teungku Muhammad Amin, who is known as a figure who contributed to the birth of one of the oldest dayah at that time, Dayah Cot Kala (Erawadi & Setiadi, 2024; Fakhirurrazi et al., 2021a; Hadi, 2017; Mizaj, 2018; Wildan, 2022).

In subsequent developments, dayah became an inseparable part of the socio-religious life of the Acehnese (Alkaf et al., 2022; Kadir et al., 2021; Nirzalin, 2018). According to Mashuri (2013); Riza (2020), educational institutions across history have at least four functions; 1) as a centre for the spread of Islam, 2) as a centre for Islamic learning, 3) as a centre for resistance to colonialism and finally 4) as a centre for community development. Based on the functions mentioned, the development of the dayah moves dynamically in the times that occur in Acehnese society. Dayah, as the formal education in the Aceh kingdom era, produced several scholars that significantly contributed to the Islamic treasures in the archipelago through their works that can still be seen today, such as Hamzah Fansuri, Syamsyuddin As-Sumatrani, Nuruddin Ar- Raniry and Abdur Rauf As-Singkily (Iswandi, 2019; Muslim, 2021; Wildan, 2022). The pattern of dayah education during the Aceh Darussalam kingdom was arranged in stages, from the lowest level at the Meunasah institution in the villages to the higher education level called dayah Manyang, which was listed in a royal rule called Qanun Meukuta Alam (Erawadi & Setiadi, 2024; Riza & Mistar, 2022; Syafieh et al., 2022).

The colonialism that occurred in Aceh in 1872, particularly after the Aceh War had an impact on the dayah's growth (Muntasir & Aminullah, 2020; Syamsuar et al., 2023; Usman et al., 2021). During that time dayah shifted its orientation from a centre of Islamic learning to combat colonialism by the Dutch. The period became a turning point in the decline of the development of the dayah, which was marked by the number of dayahs being burned by the colonialists. According to Dhuhri (2014) the dayah phase in Aceh may be divided into three phases, the first of which was characterised by the arrival of Islam in Aceh. The institutionalisation of the dayah inside the royal system and the ulama's prolific output of books on Islamic studies are what define the golden age of the dayah. The dayah's stagnation from the time of colonialism until the present is a sign of the final declination period.

Since the dayah tends to be quite conservative and traditionalist and has a low literacy rate, one may say that the dayah is currently in a period of decline. As a result, the dayah graduates’s influence in society is very restricted (Anshari et al., 2023; Riska, 2016; Saputra, 2023; Srimulyani, 2013). On further review, there exists a significant correlation between the leadership style employed by Abu as a leader in a Dayah. Weber categorizes leadership styles into three models: traditional, charismatic, and rational. Moreover, traditional leadership derives its authority from the established customs and norms of a specific society, whereas charismatic leadership is rooted in the leader's exceptional qualities such as holiness, heroism, and extraordinary character. On the other hand, legal (rational) leadership is founded on the adherence to legal principles and procedures (Husin, 2013; Ilyas et al., 2023; Mubarak et al., 2023; Muhsin et al., 2023). Currently, the leadership of Aceh's Dayah institutions is predominantly characterized by conventional and charismatic approaches, which has led to a lack of progress in the growth of Dayah in response to contemporary advancements (Ilyas & Sibuea, 2019).

One issue that arises from this is the lack of formal recognition of the information that dayah students acquire in the contemporary disruptive age. However, during the past few decades, a number of Aceh dayahs under Abu's leadership have started to alter their paradigms in order to change the dayah educational system in order to get legitimacy and recognition from the government. With this, it is believed that the dayah would be able to fulfil its role in society on a large scale, as it did during its prime. In this case, it is crucial to see the leadership of Abu Dayah in responding to adjustments in the implementation of education in the dayah, especially at the higher education level, which is called dayah Manyang.

Several studies that have been carried out related to the adjustment efforts made by dayah in responding to current educational developments are the work of Nasution & Miswari (2019) in his research entitled "Preserving Identity Through Modernity: Dayah Al-Aziziyyah and Its Negotiations with Modernity". This research was conducted with the type of case study on Dayah Al-Aziziyyah. The results of this study indicate that dayah al-Aziziyyah, as one of the traditional educations in Aceh, has taken steps to adapt to modern developments without abandoning the learning traditions that have existed and developed until now. Furthermore, Ilyas (2019); Ilyas & Sibuea (2019) in their research entitled "Leadership Transformation; Study of Islamic Boarding School (Dayah) in Aceh Province of Indonesia". This research was conducted using a qualitative approach with a phenomenological study design that examines the dayah institution in the context of its leadership management. The results of this study indicate that the tradition that developed before the dayah was led by a leader called Abu or similar titles. Nowadays, the leadership of the dayah has begun to evolve from being closed into one figure to Abu to collective leadership. In general, the two studies stated above have shown that the dayah have changed in response to the issues of our time. The study was done to demonstrate how Abu, the dayah's leader, adopted a paradigm and strategy known as Mua'dalah and Ma'had Aly program as a continuation of the notion of changing the dayah education system.

METHOD

This research is qualitative research with the type of case study conducted on several dayah sites located on the West-South and East-North coasts of Aceh province. The selection of several dayah as research sites was carried out purposively, considering that these dayahs had implemented the Mua'dalah and the Ma'had Aly program as higher education. The dayah used as the research site are Dayah Darussalam Labuhan Haji South Aceh, Dayah MadinaTuddiniyah Darul Ulumiddin Blang Pidie, located on the West-South coast of Aceh. Meanwhile, for the East-North Aceh region, the Dayah Asasul Islamiyah in East Aceh and the Madinatuddiniyah Nurul Huda Dayah in North Aceh. Data were collected by conducting in-depth interviews with several Abu leaders of these dayahs and related figures in a purposive-snowballing manner. The data obtained were then processed using interactive-analysis techniques that included the process of data condensation, data presentation and conclusion (Ridder et al., 2014).

RESULT AND DISCUSSION

The data of this research are the answers to two questions in formulating the problem of how the Abu paradigm is reorienting the dayah higher education and how the strategies are used to develop higher education in the dayah environment. Based on the data obtained in this case, the Abu Dayah in Aceh already has a discourse to carry out the process of adjusting the dayah education so that their graduates get recognition and legality from the government. Abu as a leader, is a central figure in determining the direction of dayah education (Nirzalin Armia, 2014). It is because Abu has charisma in the mastery of Islamic religious knowledge. Besides that, Abu is the founder, owner, and waqf of dayah itself. His struggle is not limited to ability, energy, and time, but also land and other... materials that are given for the advancement of Islamic symbols (Silahuddin, 2016). In fact, the presence of an Islamic educational institution is set up to address the demands of human resources in accordance with the times (Fikri, 2017).

It should not come as a surprise that many dayah graduates in the golden phase went on to become kings, qadhis, commanders, and others during the Islamic kingdom in Aceh (Silahuddin, 2016). It is as conveyed by Abu the leader of the Darussalam Labuhan Haji Dayah, as follows: "The history of the birth of the dayah in the early days of the development of Islam in Aceh was actually a center of Islamic learning to give birth to students to meet the needs of the people at that time as was the case during the Islamic kingdoms of Peurlak, Pasai and Aceh Darussalam so that some of its graduates became qadhi, commanders and even kings like Teungku Muhammad Amin in the dayah of Cot Kala and other kings.”

In Aceh, dayah education places equal emphasis on learning outputs and outcomes to help the larger community as much as possible (Wirianto, 2017). It is due to the fact that the dayah educational system is based on ideas such as iman (faith), ilmu (knowledge), amal (charity), and nasyru (Riza, 2022). Suppose it can be understood that the essence of this concept is very focused on mastering Islamic religious knowledge in the idea of science and with this capacity. In that case, it must then be able to encourage its students to practice it in daily life, both in the form of ritual worship and social-community worship. Sahlan et al., 2019). It is as conveyed by Abu Dayah Madinatuddininiyah Darul 'Ulumiddin Blang Pidie below: "Education in the dayah is actually an answer to the needs of the wider community, therefore education in the dayah is built on a concept consisting of faith in which the effort to live in the dayah is driven by faith and in this way the students are encouraged to explore the science of Islam. What they know as a result of this learning must be able to be applied in everyday life. And after the knowledge is obtained, there are other obligations that must be carried out, namely teaching it to the wider community, that is what we call nasyru.”

So far, the education carried out in the dayah tends to be quite exclusive, so it seems to close itself off from the times (Srimulyani, 2014). Learning in the dayah is only oriented towards mastering the books of fiqh and the books of tasawwuf (Usman, 2021). This exclusivity then leaves the dayah graduates relatively behind other formal Islamic education graduates such as madrasas at the school level and IAIN, UIIN and others. Islamic colleges (Kahar, 2021). Furthermore, this makes the role of dayah graduates very limited in the life of the people in Aceh. Currently, their position can only be seen in villages in small-scale activities such as being a recitation teacher at the TPA (Al-Qur'an Educational Center), doing farhdu kifayah when someone dies, becoming a Meunasah priest and others (Almuhajir, 2020). This phenomenon then became a reflection for several Abus in the dayah circles. They were called to make breakthroughs and adjustments to dayah education to get recognition and legitimacy from the government. One way to do this is by adopting the mua'dalah education model and formal diniyah education launched by the government through the ministry of religion. It is as stated by Abu Dayah Asasul Islamiyah as follows: “To get recognition and equalization from the government, the dayah party today inevitably has to follow government policies in the administration of pesantren, including in this case the dayah. At this dayah, we got permission to organize mua'dalah classes or also known as PDF, namely formal diniyah education. We do this so that students can get recognition from the government if they want to continue their education to the next level.
In addition, we have also obtained permission to hold Ma’had Aly for higher education in the dayah environment."

Higher education in the form of the Ma’had Aly program, in this case, is very much in line with the vision of the Abu Dayah. One of the reasons is the continuity in efforts to preserve the pesantren or dayah learning tradition to the students so that the practice can be maintained and maintained (Hidayat, 2017). It is different if the students continue their education outside the dayah environment. It is feared that they will be eroded and influenced by an outside culture. It is as stated by Abu Dayah Madinatuddiniyah Nurul Huda as follows: "The current existence of dayah education on the one hand is in a fairly difficult choice on the one hand the learning tradition in this dayah must be preserved as much as possible on the other hand if dayah does not adapt to current developments, the graduates will continue to be left behind. There is concern from us when the graduates continue their higher education in campuses outside the dayah which can lose their distinctive colour as dayah students. Therefore, with the Ma’had Aly program which allows the implementation of higher education in the dayah, this is certainly very helpful for us people in the dayah to continue to maintain the tradition of learning the Islamic religion as it has developed here."

To follow up on the paradigm on the implementation of higher education, in this case, Ma’had Aly in the dayah environment in Aceh, the Abu are required to carry out specific strategies. In carrying out this strategy, Abu as the leader of the dayah is supported by his charisma so that he can quickly build interconnectivity with parties to achieve the desired goals (Nadlifah et al., 2020). Based on the data obtained, in this case, the strategy includes establishing a shared vision with the entire dayah community consisting of Abu as the leader of the dayah, senior Teungku and graduates. As referred to in this case, the idea opens itself to the current era’s development. The exclusive-traditionalist attitude that has been taking root all this time is starting to shift towards a more open-minded attitude towards an inclusive-accommodative one. It does not mean that the vision adjustment made by the dayah will immediately leave the institutionalized tradition. It is as conveyed by Abu Dayah Darussalam Labuhan Haji below: “Dayah has now undergone several adjustments so that the educational goals implemented can be applied more broadly in society. There is a rule that says that preserving old traditions is good while taking new things to perfect existing traditions will be better.”

In this case, it can be understood that the dayah conservative vision now has begun to have a collective awareness to re-position the dayah as a centre for Islamic learning and especially community development which is inherent in the lives of the Acehnese people (Zulkhairi, 2021). The vision built in the course of the action of the dayah is currently also strongly supported by the existence of a particular institution in charge of developing the dayah, namely the dayah department. It is a follow-up to the Aceh government law no. 11 of 2006 in the application of Islamic Law in Aceh, including in the field of Islamic education (Abee et al., 2019). In the last two decades, this condition has contributed a lot to the effort to build a vision of dayah education in a better direction.

Furthermore, to realize the implementation of higher education in the dayah environment, Abu, who graduates assist, builds communication and networks with related parties and the government. One of them, as mentioned above, is the dayah service, the leading partner in the development of the dayah in Aceh. Communication, in this case, is also built with the executive and legislative government to get support both materially and non-materially. This is as conveyed by Abu Dayah Madinatuddiniyah Darul 'Ulumiddin Blang Pidie below: “In order to realize the implementation of higher education in this dayah, we communicate a lot with related parties, especially in this case the dayah department which is given special authority to fix the dayah. On certain occasions, when we hold meetings with regents, governors and also several members of the DPRK and DPRA, we ask for directions and instructions so that our wishes can be carried out as they should be.”

On other occasions, effective communication between Abu and the government provided doors to expand the Teungku’s capacity as educators, allowing them to complete their studies at the post-graduate program. It aided Abu in putting other plans into action to make the Ma’had Aly initiative successful. The presence of qualified human resources who can join the program as teachers is one of the essential factors in this situation. The Acehnese government has given the Dayah community and Acehnese in general a lot of room to grow through the scholarship program by using the special autonomy money. It is as stated by Abu Dayah Dayah Asasul Islamiyah as follows: “In recent years, the teungku dayah have been greatly helped by the scholarships provided by the Aceh government to continue their education specifically in the postgraduate program. This really helps us to prepare lecturers who have a dayah background to work together to develop the Ma’had Aly program in our dayah environment.”

The dayah has encouraged the Teungku, who serve as educators in the dayah, to apply for scholarships offered by the central government through the Ministry of Religion Affair in addition to using the scholarships offered by the Aceh government. It is as Abu Dayah Madinatuddiniyah Nurul Huda said below: "We are very grateful that the development of the Ma’had Aly program in our dayah environment has received a lot of support from various parties such as the Aceh government through the Aceh scholarship commission program and lastly through the human resource empowerment institution. Besides that, there are also scholarships given by the ministry of religion for the development of Islamic boarding schools.”

From the description described above, dayah education in the current contemporary era has made innovations to answer the challenges and needs of the community, especially those within the province of Aceh. Dayah, which in recent decades, especially after the colonialism era, was considered quite conservative and orthodox, had made some adjustments (Fakhrurrazi et al., 2021b). In some instances, dayah educational institutions in Aceh seem very rigid in the development of education (Muhajir et al., 2021). The system of ownership of the dayah, which is controlled by the figure of Abu, on the other hand, makes it difficult for the dayah to follow the direction of government policies, especially related to curriculum development (Tabrani et al., 2021)

In the end, the educational system that seeks official approval and legitimacy has gradually altered the dayahs in Aceh’s perspective on Islamic education. It is evident from the Abu Dayah leaders’ perspective, which has modified the educational system to allow Dayah graduates to be welcomed and take an active part in society.

CONCLUSION

The dayah educational institution is an archipelago Islamic treasure that still exists and is accepted in the socio-religious life of the Acehnese people. Dayah in Acehnese society at least plays a vital role as a centre for Islamic learning and a centre for community development. In the last two decades, the part of the dayah through graduates has decreased along with the development of formal Islamic educational institutions such as madrasas at the school level and Islamic universities at the tertiary level. This phenomenon is possible because the education system run in the dayah does not get recognition and legitimacy from the government. Consequently, the movement of graduates in society is relatively narrow. Dayah is starting to open up to implement an education system that the government can recognize by implementing the Mua'dalah and Ma'had Aly programs at the higher education level. It was also followed by a change in Abu Dayah's paradigm from an exclusive-conservative style to a more open paradigm, namely inclusive-accommodative. In developing this dayah, this paradigm was followed up by Abu Dayah through the strategies used for the implementation of the Mua'dalah and Ma'had Aly programs by preparing the Teungku as educators to be able to continue their education at the postgraduate level in addition to continuing to build relationships to partner with the government.
